

THE HUFFINGTON POST

THE INTERNET NEWSPAPER: NEWS BLOGS VIDEO COMMUNITY

Architect Alfred Rosenheim's Self-Designed Former Mansion Hits Market For $4.5 Million

The Huffington Post First Posted: 02- 1-11 11:28 AM | Updated: 02- 1-11 12:34 PM

Read More: Alfred Rosenheim, Alfred Rosenheim Home, Architectural Homes In LA, Country Club Park Real Estate, La Real Estate, Slidepollajax, Los Angeles News

Via Curbed LA: Architect Alfred Rosenheim, known for designing Los Angeles monuments such as downtown's Hellman Building, the Hamburger Department Store, and the Eugene W. Britt House, designed this as a home for himself in the early 1900s. Now a registered Los Angeles Cultural Monument, this Country Club Park mansion is on the market for $4.5 million. The three-story, 10,440 square foot house has six bedrooms, five bathrooms and sits on almost an acre of land alongside a former chapel that is now used as a recording studio. Details like stained-glass windows and silver and gold leaf painted ceilings complete the estate's classic, elegant look and, according to the official listing, evoke "the quality and grandeur of a bygone era."

Photos by Cameron Carothers. Official listing Joe Babajian and Brad Downs, Rodeo Realty.

